

ALTERNATE ENDING

1. Select a Book:

Choose a book that you have read recently. Be familiar with the original ending and the main plot points.

2. Reflect on the Original Ending:

Take some time to think about the original ending of the book. Consider the following questions:

- What did you like about the ending?
- What didn't you like or felt was unresolved?
- How did the ending affect your overall impression of the book?

3. Develop Your Alternate Ending:

- Imagine a different outcome for the main characters or the overall story.
- Think about how your new ending will change the message or theme of the book.
- Consider using one of the following approaches:
 - Change a critical decision made by a character.
 - Introduce a new character who influences the outcome.
 - Set the story in a different time or place.
 - Create a twist that alters the reader's understanding of the story.

4. Write Your Alternate Ending:

- Begin with a brief introduction that summarizes the original ending and sets the stage for your alternate version.
- Write the alternate ending, focusing on maintaining the tone and style of the original author.

5. Reflect on Your Choice:

- After writing your alternate ending, include a short reflection discussing why you chose to change the ending and what you hoped to achieve with your version. Consider the following:
 - How does your ending change the impact of the story?
 - What themes or messages do you want to highlight?
